GIVEAWAY SHOWS ILLEGAL?

Radio Plans Major Battle Against Newest FCC Ban

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 — Spare-no-expense court battles contesting the Federal Communications Commission ban on radio giveaway programs probably will keep the airways busy with jack-pot programs for some time to come.

The FCC said it invites a court test of its ruling that radio "winner-take-all" shows are illegal. It relies upon an anti-lottery statute as ground for its order that radio giveaway programs must be taken off the air within three years from Oct. 1.

Television giveaways were ruled off the screens in 12 months.

But reaction from the radio industry indicates a long and hard court fight that could delay enforcement of the FCC ban for years.

First reaction came from the American Broadcasting Co.

which announced that "no changes will be made in ABC programs as a result of the regulations."

THE NETWORK, whose "Stop The Music" program was a pioneer in the field, immediately announced that it will seek a court ruling on the FCC directive.

Justin Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, termed the decision an "intrusion into the administration of criminal law." Miller is a former appeals court judge.

The agency plans to make its order effective by refusing after Oct. 1 to renew broadcast licenses of any radio or television station carrying a "giveaway" show.

All AM and FM stations have to renew their licenses every three years and television stations every two years.

Dope Smuggling Ring Is Smashed

Narcotic Agents Say Outfit Operated Between U. S., Peru

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 — U. S. narcotics agents claimed today the smashing of a $5 million-a-year Peruvian-American cocaine smuggling ring, jailed the alleged leader and fanned out across the United States to pick up 50 to 60 more gang members.

The ring was described as so powerful that it financed a dangerous—though defeated—revolt in Peru last year.

At least 80 persons were declared to be already in custody in Peru, including the wife of Eduardo Balarezo, 48, held under $100,000 in New York as the alleged smuggling kingpin.

Balarezo, who gave his address as North Great River, L. I., was taken from the liner LaGuardia Thursday night before it sailed for Italy. He was arraigned yesterday on a charge of conspiring to smuggle and transport narcotics.

THE NARCOTICS bureau of the Treasury Department said that the ring headed by Balarezo, a Peruvian who is a naturalized U. S. citizen, was the most extensive ever encountered in the bureau's history.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Joseph P. Martin said that the smashing of the multi-million dollar ring was accomplished through the cooperation of U. S. narcotic agents, Peruvian investigators and United Nations attaches.

More than 80 persons were reported arrested in Peru in connection with the ring, and 50 to 60 others were said to be involved in the U. S.

Martin asserted that Balarezo had taken the job as steward aboard the LaGuardia so as to contact Charles (Lucky) Luciano, now in Italy, on the prospects of smuggling heroin into the U. S.

The prosecutor said that in 1947, American agents were tipped off that the Peruvian, masquerading as a seaman on ships plying between Peru and the U. S., was the head of the organization.

For two years, Martin related, U. S. and Peruvian officials were on his trail, even taking 1,000 feet of movie film without Balarezo's knowledge.

AT THE HEIGHT of its operations in 1947 and 1948, the U. S. attorney said, the ring was smuggling 50 kilograms of pure cocaine per month into the U. S. Cut with sugar of milk and opium salts, the drug sold for between $7,000 and $9,000 per kilogram.

Balarezo reportedly befriended seamen, who would pick up the cocaine in Peru and bring it to the U. S. at a fee of $1000 per shipment.

Peru Breaks With Cuba

LIMA, Peru, Aug. 20—Peru broke off relations with Cuba last night in a dispute over the flight of two Peruvian politicians opposed to the ruling military junta.

A note to the Havana government said that Cuban officials in Lima had taken "unprecedented steps" in helping Fernando Leon de Vivero and Pedro Muniz to escape.

The two leaders of the outlawed Aprista Party arrived in Cuba Thursday. They were the central figures in a dispute over rights of asylum after they were granted refuge in the Cuban embassy in Lima.

'5 PERCENTER' PROBE CONTINUING

Government Sets New Plan To Check Contract Fees

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 — The government moved today to smoke out "five percenters" by requiring businessmen to state whether they are paying anyone a fee to obtain federal contracts.

Jess Larson, administrator of the new Government Services Agency, said the policy will be applied in government purchasing as far as possible.

Other sources reported that GSA already is conferring with other federal agencies on forms to be used in showing where so-called "influence peddlers" are operating.

The plan is to have a manufacturer who sells to the government state in his contract whether he is paying anyone a "contingent fee" for helping him obtain the contract.

LARSON POINTED out that this will provide a record to show when a "five percenter" receives fees from a wide variety of contracts, or from contracts coming from a single source.

The government could also deduct from payments or bids any fees deemed unjustified, and could prosecute for income tax violations if unrecorded fees were paid.

Larson said that no action by Congress is necessary. He said the government already has authority to require the information and to prosecute for false statements in contracts.

Meanwhile, a Senate "five percent" probe said he will ask a full inquiry into reports that Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan once intervened in connection with federal curbs on use of grain by distilleries.

Sen. Mundt, (R) S. D., expressed an interest in reports that President Truman's military aide telephoned Nathan Koenig, Agriculture Department official, concerning the restrictions in 1946.

The department clamped down on grain consumption by liquor manufacturers because of a tight grain supply.

VAUGHAN ALLEGEDLY contacted Koenig after a call from Harry Hoffman, Milwaukee advertising man, who complained that the limitations were hurting distillery operations.

Truck Drive Lags Here; Fayette Efforts Double

While the Circleville-Pickaway County war against unnecessary traffic noises marked time Friday with no arrests recorded, over in Fayette County the campaign was stepped up.

In Washington C. H. the tally of arrests for operating noisy vehicles has jumped to three, with two drivers of heavy trucks arrested Friday. Each was fined $10 and costs by Police Court Justice R. H. Sites. One driver was arrested Thursday.

The drivers were George Windson, 35, of Indianapolis, and R. H. Walther, 28, of St. Louis, Friday, and Robert Edward Bobo, 18, of Mt. Sterling, Thursday.

Windson was picked up first and charged with driving without a muffler. While his case was being heard before Justice Sites another truck roared by, making human sounds in the courtroom inaudible.

A WORD FROM Justice Sites, a brief chase by Police Chief Vaiden Long, and Walton was standing before the court.

The drivers readily admitted to the court that they had been making too much noise.

Fayette County Sheriff Orland

Hays said he was 100 percent behind the drive, thus paralleling action taken by Pickaway County Sheriff Charles Radcliff.

Pickaway County Sheriff Charles Radcliff pointed out that noises in Circleville and Pickaway County have slackened since the arrest and fining of two trucks early in the week.

Police Chief William McCrady said he intends to stick by his decision to give the drivers a warning period. After next Wednesday, his patrolmen will start making arrests, he said.

In Washington C. H. police are being commended by citizens for starting the move to bring about a more quiet city.

Maryland Inventor 'Missing'

Two Discs Found In Old Barn

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 — An Air Force official said today he believes that a missing Maryland inventor may have been responsible for the mysterious "flying saucers" reported sighted throughout the nation in 1947 and 1948.

An intensive search has been launched for Jonathan Caldwell, the inventor, who disappeared in 1941. Police advanced the theory that he may have been a frustrated inventor who was blocked in his attempt to develop a new type of plane.

The search for Caldwell was touched off by the finding of two weird discs—described as definite prototypes of the "flying saucers"—in a tobacco barn near Baltimore yesterday.

A mechanic, John W. Ganz, who claims to have worked with the missing inventor, told authorities that Caldwell designed the strange discs. He described Caldwell as being "10 years ahead of his time" in the field of aircraft design.

COMMENTING ON the search for Caldwell, an Air Force official said:

"I personally think he went to some other part of the country and developed new planes along these lines and is sending them up."

The whereabouts of Caldwell are just as much a mystery as were the "flying saucers." Neither the Air Force nor police has been able to uncover a single clue to indicate what happened to him.

Authorities acting on an anonymous "tip" located the saucers. They said the discs definitely were prototypes of the devices many persons reported to have been skimming through the air in 1947.

An investigation of these incidents has been under way by the Air Force for some time, but no official conclusions have been announced.

A male quartet, consisting of Rev. Mr. Herbst, Rev. Mr. Carothers, C. O. Leist and Dale DeLong will sing "My Anchor Holds."

Rev. Mr. Herbst is a member of the Pickaway County Ministerial Association, which has co-sponsored the series of union services in the park in conjunction with Circleville Kiwanis Club.

Glen Burnie, Md., about 12 miles south of Baltimore, in a barn which apparently had not been used since 1941.

Caldwell left the community about that time and Maryland police have been able to find no trace of him. This was about six years before the "flying saucers" scare claimed public interest.

AIR FORCE authorities are not convinced that either of the devices found in the barn was ever flown, although one was damaged as though it might have crashed during flight.

They surmised that these may have been models from which improved machines could have been developed.

Ganz said he had worked with the missing inventor on the discs. It was he who asserted that Caldwell was far in the lead of other aircraft designers.

Ganz said that Caldwell planned to set up a company to manufacture the discs and that he actually tested one of them in Washington in 1939.

The state of Maryland prevented Caldwell on two occasions from selling stock in corporations aimed at providing funds to perfect his inventions.

The discs are about 15 feet in diameter. They are equipped with propellers and motors and one has a small fuselage like that on a conventional airplane.

Local Man, 71, Hurt As Car Is Hit By Deisel

A 71-year-old Circleville man was injured Friday when the car he was driving was struck by a railway locomotive.

The accident took place on the South Washington street crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad. L. F. Stout of Logan street, driver of the car, told Patrolman George Green he was driving south on Washington street as he crossed the track. He said he failed to see the diesel engine approaching from the west.

The patrolman said the diesel, operated by Paul Willison of Lancaster, struck Stout's car on the right side and shoved it off the crossing.

Stout was injured and taken to Berger hospital, where he was treated for bruises to the chest, right elbow, and right knee.

HOSPITAL SUPER-DELUXE It's Tulsa's Multi-Million Dollar Haven

PLASTIC NURSERY—Newly-born babies get first glimpse of world from ultra-modern plastic cradles.

A PLAYROOM, TOO—Children's playroom atop St. John's looks out over hospital's tiled sun-deck.

By JOANNE MILLIGAN

Central Press Correspondent

TULSA, Okla.—That old song about not wanting to get well may become a reality if the nation's hospitals get any more luxurious.

One of the plushiest "palladiums" in the United States is St. John's hospital in Tulsa, Okla. Others like it are being built in many portions of the country.

Five hundred patients can be accommodated at the Oklahoma institution and there is always a waiting list. Patients are admitted from all over the nation.

The swankiest rooms are located in a wing known as the New Annex which was completed recently. This addition is the last word in elegance and modern convenience.

Here, patients take it easy in colorful, modishly decorated rooms. Each has a separate lavatory, many have private baths and there are some suites consisting of living room, bedroom and bath.

Walls are papered or painted in soft, pastel shades and the furniture is blond wood of modern design. Even the regulation hospital bed, while it retains its utilitarian fittings, is dressed up with a blond wood frame.

INDIVIDUAL "under-the-pillow" radio speakers are installed at each bed and these can be played at the patient's will. The tone is clear and audible within the room but not a sound escapes outside where it might disturb other patients.

Convalescing patients take particular pleasure in individual telephones and when they tire of calling friends, they may read in comfort under a special glareproof light built in over each bed.

Probably the most novel feature of each room is its tele-talk or auto-call system. Whenever a patient wants something, he presses a bell and immediately a voice floats through a ceiling receiver with the pleasant command, "Order, please."

The communication system not only saves steps for the nurses but speeds up service for the patients. If a desk attendant should be absent from the floor when a call is made, the call is automatically relayed to the floor above or below. There are also emergency call facilities in each room for the use of nurses when extra help is needed.

OXYGEN can be piped to each bedside when necessary and there are numerous electrical connections so that various types of treatment may be given in the room without moving the patient.

Waiting rooms are gay with color and brightly comfortable furnishings. Glass block construction permits maximum light, plants and flowers line the window sills and the chirping of birds contributes to the general hopeful effect.

The exact cost of the hospital, built and run by the Sisters of the Sorrowful Mother, is not disclosed.

Sister Olga, superintendent, only gasps as she thinks of the huge sums spent on the annex alone but a fairly close estimate is in excess of two million dollars.

The late Gen. John J. Pershing turned up the first shovel of earth for the hospital on Feb. 11, 1920, but the institution seemed doomed to failure when a depression in the Oklahoma oil industry resulted in unfulfilled pledges.

The project was saved when a group of determined Tulsa citizens exhausted every effort to raise the necessary funds.

On Feb. 22, 1926, 24 patients were admitted to the hospital.

THE SCHOOL of Nursing was opened in 1926, and after that St. John's continued to prosper and expand. The hospital is particularly proud of its cancer clinic, opened in 1933, its X-ray facilities and the anesthesia department.

Typical of the hospital's efficiency is the doctors' in and out register which serves 200 physicians and records their presence in the building.

The maternity department features a completely equipped milk laboratory and mothers' milk bank. New-born babies are installed in individual plastic cradles under germicidal lamps and a separate nursery equipped with incubators is used for premature infants.

Both nurseries have oxygen outlets handy for emergencies. The nurseries and children's wards are decorated appealingly with colored decals and comic strip characters. Even the curtains are embroidered with the festive figures.

On a top floor of the building, a children's playroom may be opened completely to the south to convert to a sun deck.

No description of a hospital is complete without a word about its food and St. John's is up to its own excellent standard when it comes to feeding its patients.

In fact, an ice cream prepared in the hospital kitchen is well on its way to becoming famous, it's so tasty.

Priest Frees 'Evil Spirit' From Lad, Catholics Say

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20—Catholic sources claimed today that a priest has freed a 14-year-old lad who was haunted by "evil spirits" for four months.

The National Catholic Welfare Conference in casting new light on the weird case said the priest performed the rite of exorcism—rarely used since the early days of Christianity.

The lad, a resident of suburban Mt. Ranier, Md., was first under exhaustive observation in Georgetown university hospital in Washington and St. Louis university, both Catholic institutions.

A scientific organization in Washington first made public some of the details of the strange happenings in the youth's home.

IT SAID THE bed in which the boy attempted to sleep shook violently, that he once was tipped out of a heavy chair by unseen forces and that there were "scratches" inside the walls of his home.

Relatives said the youth first exhibited his baffling "symptoms" last January following the death of an aunt. They said he was terrified by sounds no one else could hear and forces no one else could feel.

A Protestant minister who was close to the family took the boy to his own home and there observed some of the uncanny happenings.

Then the youth, with parental permission, was instructed in the Catholic doctrine and was received into the church as groundwork for the ritual ahead.

The priest—still unidentified—spent two months with his young subject. The rite was performed more than once before the youth finally was brought back to normal last April.

A volley of screams, curses and a stream of Latin phrases, is said to have come from the young subject when the priest reached the climax of the ceremony with these words:

"In the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, I cast thee (the evil spirits) out."

The ritual lasted about 45 minutes.

1921 Marriage Is Ended By Divorce Here

A 28-year-old marriage has been dissolved in Pickaway County common pleas court with the granting of a divorce to Rachel M. Isaac from Luther V. Isaac. The husband was found guilty of gross neglect of duty.

The couple was married Feb. 7, 1921 in Maysville, Ky. They have no children. The court restored the wife's former name, Rachel Hickman, to her, and ordered that a settlement agreement between the parties reached Aug. 11, 1949 be made part of the divorce decree.

The settlement allows for equal division of property amounting to $4,113.74.

Meet the Army Special Service Girl She's Doing Fine Job for Uncle Sam---From Guam to Berlin

Two Special Service club recreational directors leave, with their escorts, a ceremonial tea room in Yokohama, Japan. Note shoes which are left at threshold in accordance with ancient Nipponese custom.

By ESTHER V. W. TUFTY

Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Overseas, the Red Cross girl with the doughnut is gone. Today there is the Special Services girl with a "snack."

Fifty SS girls have just arrived in Europe aboard an Army transport. Not since the Army Special Services began taking over the Red Cross recreational activities in Paris in November, 1944 (during the Battle of the Bulge) have as many as 50 young American SS girls arrived at one time.

Yet this "record" is just one month's quota of the SS girls the Army is sending everywhere from Guam to Nuernburg!

"Wherever our troops are stationed, there you'll find Special Services personnel," says attractive, competent WAC Capt. Nan Rice, who heads up the SS girls' activities. (Not all SS girls are WACS. In fact, she is the one and only.)

Captain Rice, who hails from Niles, Mich., and is a graduate of Alma college, joined the Army Special Services on VE day. Incidentally, she is the only WAC given a "direct" commission.

SHE WEARS PROUDLY the WAC uniform, but maybe she sometimes envies the SS girl in her more feminine, steel-blue outfit not so "uniformish." (Even the summer uniform of blue and white seersucker manages to be smart and becoming.)

Today those trim uniforms with the rainbow patch on the left shoulder are worn by 1,150 young women in all six Army commands. That means Europe, Trieste, Alaska, Hawaii, the Far East and, of course, the United States.

The SS girl is good news for the GI.

She offers several kinds of home-sick medicine. In the Special Services clubs, she directs a recreation and amusement program. Always there's athletics and right now it's baseball. The snack bar is a "must." The hobby shop is popular. Then there are movies, music, dances, amateur shows, contests and local excursions.

Many GIs are having the one chance of a lifetime to see Europe. So sightseeing tours are planned by SS.

Number 1 is a day trip on the Rhine to a yacht!

FOR $15 a trip can be arranged from Karlsruhe to the Swiss Alps. In other parts of the world the 35 "rest hotels" are open to GIs in Hawaii and the Far East. Free guided tours are one feature.

To entertain the GI in peace time calls for different programming—and maybe a different kind of American girl to replace the Red Cross worker.

To begin with, the GI is different himself. He's the kid brother of the "I of World War II. He's younger. And he isn't afraid of being shot the next day. He isn't as tired physically . . . and he wants to use up his energies in a brisk game of baseball or some other sport. He "prefers soda to beer."

Naturally the Army is fussy about the kind of girl accepted for the Special Services assignment.

First and foremost she must possess an A-1 personality. Apparently to the Army that means a cheerful, adaptable, resourceful American girl who is sensible about men. Most of those selected are college graduates with some special experience in recreation work.

CAPTAIN RICE says the SS girl "must be a combination of recreational technician, business woman, psychologist and entertainer."

But she warns "She must be prepared to work a minimum of four evenings a week in addition to her daytime duties."

There's no dearth of volunteers, probably, Captain Rice says, because of the "triple appeal of adventure, patriotism and wanting to help."

The headquarters of the SS girls in the United States is the modest office of Captain Rice. Located just around the corner from the Army War college in "Temporary C," she interviews her girls coming and going.

These three reported one morning:

Trim, friendly Nell Blair breezed in from Germany. She was off for a 30-day leave in her native Texas. Her last address was Badnaheim, where she was an assistant Service club director.

Talented, energetic Katherine Morgan of Georgia has been a Service club director in European capitals Paris, Berlin, Vienna and Brussels. She's back to do a recruiting job.

From Omaha, Neb., to Hawaii, is the story of Lois Ann Medlock. She was there when the volcano Mauna Loa erupted during her two-year stint as Service club director at Kilauea military camp.

Maragon, also a friend of Vaughan and a former White House pass-holder, at the time represented the Verley Perfume Co. of Chicago. The firm paid for the freezers.

Other developments in the "five percent" investigation: 1. Sen. Hoey, (D) N. C., chairman of the investigating committee, said the freezer matter "has been magnified out of all proportion to its importance."

2. The committee announced that it expects to hear next Tuesday from Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, suspended Army quartermaster general, and from Maragon and Vaughan later in the week.

3. Investigators are seeking to learn how Maragon obtained passage aboard an Air Transport Command plane when space was very limited.

Maryland Inventor 'Missing'

Glen Burnie, Md., about 12 miles south of Baltimore, in a barn which apparently had not been used since 1941.

Caldwell left the community about that time and Maryland police have been able to find no trace of him. This was about six years before the "flying saucers" scare claimed public interest.

AIR FORCE authorities are not convinced that either of the devices found in the barn was ever flown, although one was damaged as though it might have crashed during flight.

They surmised that these may have been models from which improved machines could have been developed.

Ganz said he had worked with the missing inventor on the discs. It was he who asserted that Caldwell was far in the lead of other aircraft designers.

Ganz said that Caldwell planned to set up a company to manufacture the discs and that he actually tested one of them in Washington in 1939.

The state of Maryland prevented Caldwell on two occasions from selling stock in corporations aimed at providing funds to perfect his inventions.

The discs are about 15 feet in diameter. They are equipped with propellers and motors and one has a small fuselage like that on a conventional airplane.

Local Man, 71, Hurt As Car Is Hit By Deisel

A 71-year-old Circleville man was injured Friday when the car he was driving was struck by a railway locomotive.

The accident took place on the South Washington street crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad. L. F. Stout of Logan street, driver of the car, told Patrolman George Green he was driving south on Washington street as he crossed the track. He said he failed to see the diesel engine approaching from the west.

The patrolman said the diesel, operated by Paul Willison of Lancaster, struck Stout's car on the right side and shoved it off the crossing.

Stout was injured and taken to Berger hospital, where he was treated for bruises to the chest, right elbow, and right knee.

PLASTIC NURSERY—Newly-born babies get first glimpse of world from ultra-modern plastic cradles.

A PLAYROOM, TOO—Children's playroom atop St. John's looks out over hospital's tiled sun-deck.

By JOANNE MILLIGAN
Central Press Correspondent

TULSA, Okla.—That old song about not wanting to get well may become a reality if the nation's hospitals get any more luxurious.

One of the plushiest "pill-palaces" in the United States is St. John's hospital in Tulsa, Okla. Others like it are being built in many portions of the country.

Five hundred patients can be accommodated at the Oklahoma institution and there is always a waiting list. Patients are admitted from all over the nation.

The swankiest rooms are located in a wing known as the New Annex which was completed recently. This addition is the last word in elegance and modern convenience.

Here, patients take it easy in colorful, modishly decorated rooms. Each has a separate lavatory, many have private baths and there are some suites consisting of living room, bedroom and bath.

Walls are papered or painted in soft, pastel shades and the furniture is blond wood of modern design. Even the regulation hospital bed, while it retains its utilitarian fittings, is dressed up with a blond wood frame.

INDIVIDUAL "under-the-pillow" radio speakers are installed at each bed and these can be played at the patient's will. The tone is clear and audible within the room but not a sound escapes outside where it might disturb other patients.

Convalescing patients take particular pleasure in individual telephones and when they tire of calling friends, they may read in comfort under a special glareproof light built in over each bed.

Probably the most novel feature of each room is its tele-talk or auto-call system. Whenever a patient wants something, he presses a bell and immediately a voice floats through a ceiling receiver with the pleasant command, "Order, please."

The communication system not only saves steps for the nurses but speeds up service for the patients. If a desk attendant should be absent from the floor when a call is made, the call is automatically relayed to the floor above or below. There are also emergency call facilities in each room for the use of nurses when extra help is needed.

OXYGEN can be piped to each bedside when necessary and there are numerous electrical connections so that various types of treatment may be given in the room without moving the patient.

Waiting rooms are gay with color and brightly comfortable furnishings. Glass block construction permits maximum light, plants and flowers line the window sills and the chirping of birds contributes to the general hopeful effect.

The exact cost of the hospital, built and run by the Sisters of the Sorrowsful Mother, is not disclosed.

Sister Olga, superintendent, only gasps as she thinks of the huge sums spent on the annex alone but a fairly close estimate is in excess of two million dollars.

The late Gen. John J. Pershing turned up the first shovel of earth for the hospital on Feb. 11, 1920, but the institution seemed doomed to failure when a depression in the Oklahoma oil industry resulted in unfulfilled pledges.

The project was saved when a group of determined Tulsa citizens exhausted every effort to raise the necessary funds.

On Feb. 22, 1926, 24 patients were admitted to the hospital.

THE SCHOOL of Nursing was opened in 1926, and after that St. John's continued to prosper and expand. The hospital is particularly proud of its cancer clinic, opened in 1938, its X-ray facilities and the anesthesia department.

GLOBE MAY ADOPT NEW WORLD CALENDAR DEC. 31, 1950—IF UNITED STATES APPROVES

By HENRY C. NICHOLAS

Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Dec. 31, 1950, promises to be a notable day, apart from the fact it marks the mid-turning point of the Twentieth Century. On this day under the sponsorship of the United Nations, the world is expected to shelve the calendar confusion of the last two thousand years and begin the second half century living under the efficient, streamlined World Calendar.

For centuries scholars, business men and statesmen have urged the adoption of the World Calendar. The suggestion has been discussed and approved at many world conferences. It now looks as if definite action is about to be taken.

Seventeen countries have given formal approval to the World Calendar, the latest being the Republic of Panama. Twenty-four other governments have stated they will adopt and support such a change. These nations include those as far apart in their political views as Argentina, Australia, Japan, China, Turkey, Saudi Arabia and Czechoslovakia.

The one condition these nations have made is that some major power such as the United States, Great Britain, France or Russia take the initiative. The United States has accepted the invitation, Senator Estes Kefauver (D, Tennessee), has introduced a measure, which has been referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, which would give United States approval to the World Calendar.

IT IS GENERALLY believed that the enactment of this measure will assure the discussion of the World Calendar being placed on the agenda of the next session of the General Assembly of the United Nations. Its adoption is now regarded as assured.

The world's present calendar is virtually the one introduced by Julius Caesar (100-44 B. C.), whose astronomers named the seventh month after this great Roman. The only corrections made in this calendar were those made by the astronomers of Pope Gregory XIII in 1582.

These corrections, however, failed to make the calendar an efficient time measurer or change its shiftiness. The months continued to retain an irregular number of days, with national holidays meandering all over the week. One result was that while one knew the date of his birth, few of us ever knew on what day of the week that event happened to be.

In the proposed World Calendar the four quarters of the year each consist of 13 weeks, or 91 days, and begin on Sunday and end on Saturday. Every month will have 26 weekdays plus Sundays, with every year beginning on Sunday.

HOLIDAYS will be fixed, falling on the same day every year, and for the first time the calendar will have true comparability, not for a year but for centuries. The quarters of the year are equalized and the days of the week and dates always agree.

Under the World Calendar, two dates in the present calendar would be retired and two new dates would replace them. These new dates will appear on the calendar as the letter W instead of a number.

The present Dec. 31 would become a new W December, denoting a new day to be known as Worldday, which it is hoped will be celebrated in every country as an international holiday for world-wide peace and unity. Always coming between a Saturday and a Sunday it gives the world a three-day weekend holiday.

The extra day in leap year every four years, Feb. 29, would become W June (June 31). This would be known as Leapyear Day. Falling between a Saturday and a Sunday it would supply another three-day weekend holiday. It is hoped that Leapyear Day will be another true world holiday, to be observed as such throughout the world.

Senator Kefauver's action brings to a dramatic climax a appeal direct to the Vatican, as is usual in excommunications, but that local parish priests and bishops could decide on their own authority upon the granting of absolution and restoration to the church.

It never has been possible since the decree was handed down to ascertain just how many Catholics throughout the world were affected and to what extent.

The present willingness of the church to sanction marriage between Catholics and Communists under certain well-defined conditions makes it amply clear, however, that the Holy See still differentiates strongly between acts of commission and omission.

His new action may well encourage rising Catholic resistance to Communism. It emphasizes the church's capacity for forgiveness—something entirely alien to Communist philosophy.

'Priceless' Manuscripts May Tell New Bible Story

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—A group of six international experts is engaged today in a careful painstaking study of "priceless" Biblical manuscripts found by Arabs in a crumbling cave near the Dead Sea.

One of the scholars participating in the study, which has been going on quietly for some 18 months, is Dr. John C. Trever, director of the department of the English Bible for the International Council of Religious Education, Chicago.

Dr. Trever said that the oldest of the manuscripts—scrolls on leather—is 23 feet long and contains the complete book of Isaiah.

He added that it was written in ancient Hebrew—probably around 125 B. C. Dr. Trever said:

"This pre-dates by 1,000 years the earliest previously known Isaiah manuscript in Hebrew on which the book in present versions of the Bible is based."

Four manuscripts, Dr. Trever said, are in the U. S. for study by three scholars. Whereabouts of the manuscripts have been kept secret because of their fragile condition.

According to Dr. Trever the other three manuscripts in the U. S. deal with religious history, with two being written in ancient Hebrew and the third in Aramaic. They are believed to have been written shortly before the middle of the first century.

Dr. Trever said that the document in Aramaic is so decomposed that no safe way has been found yet to unroll the leather scroll. He said scientists are still searching for a technique which will permit the manuscript to be opened and read.

Praise Given for God's Works

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Psalms 8; 19:1-6; 65:9-18; 104.

When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained; what is man that Thou art mindful of him, O Lord?

The Lord made man to have dominion over all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field; the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea.

The Lord crowns the year with His goodness . . . the pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered with corn; they also sing.

The sun ariseth, and the man goeth forth unto his work and to his labor until the evening.

Methodist Service Outlined

Sunday's program in First Methodist church opens at 9:15 a. m. with church school and religious education. Departments from cradle roll to adult classes are provided and devotional programs suitable to each age group carefully are worked out in advance.

After devotional programs the classes assemble in their respective places for Bible study and discussion.

Morning worship will begin at 10:30 a. m. with the prelude "Adante Religioso," played by Mrs. Ervin Leist. For her special number Mrs. Leist will use, "Priest March," by Mozart.

A quartet composed of Norma Graham, Pearl Defenbaugh, Richard Valentine and Dr. W. Lloyd Sproule will sing the anthem, "Lord God, Our Redeemer." Richard Valentine, tenor soloist, will sing the offertory "Green Pastures."

The familiar hymns "O Could I Speak the Matchless Worth" and "O Master let Me Walk With Thee" are to be sung by the congregation.

For his sermon subject, the Rev. Elisha Kneisley has chosen "Seeing Through a Dark Glass." The thought in the subject is that "human knowledge is imperfect, and it is only when we see knowledge in the light of Jesus can we say that we really know."

Localites Plan Attending Parley Next Week

Ohio Evangelical United Brethren conference is to be held this coming week in Canton.

It will begin at 9 a. m. Wednesday with sessions lasting through Sunday afternoon. This year the conference is being entertained by the Calvary Evangelical United Brethren church of Canton.

Those who will be going from the Circleville area will include C. A. Bolender, lay delegate from Calvary EUB church; Claris Bennett, lay delegate from Yellowbud EUB church; the Rev. James A. Herbst, pastor of these above churches; and the Rev. Grant Carothers, a ministerial student from the Calvary church who is preparing himself for full time service. These persons plan to be present for the first sessions Wednesday morning.

One of the items which will be of definite interest in this conference session will be the discussion concerning the reorganization of the five EUB conferences which are within the Ohio boundaries. This has been brought about by the recent union of the United Brethren church with the Evangelical denomination.

*The Year-End World Holiday, W December (365th day), Weekday follows 30 December every year.

NEW WORLD CALENDAR—Two extra holidays, W December and W June!

quarters of the year are equalized, and the days of the week and dates always agree.

Under the World Calendar, two dates in the present calendar would be retired and two new dates would replace them. These new dates will appear on the calendar as the letter W instead of a number.

Falling between a Saturday and a Sunday it would supply another three-day weekend holiday. It is hoped that Leapyear Day will be another true world holiday, to be observed as such throughout the world.

Senator Kefauver's action brings to a dramatic climax a long and intensive movement which has been waged for a perpetual equal-quarter calendar to replace the outmoded Gregorian calendar.

PROMPT ACTION by the United Nations is being urged as the change-over could readily be made on Dec. 31, 1950, when the Gregorian and the World Calendar coincide. If no action is taken at the fourth session of the assembly, a similar favorable opportunity will not recur until 1956.

The World Calendar has won approval of the financial and business worlds because of its provision of equal quarters of 91 days each, under which the quarter is actually one-fourth of the 364-day year. The necessary 365th day is the new Worldday.

In the field of labor, the new calendar has won approval as a perfect timing-tool whereby wages and expenses can be figured more accurately, since payments will always come at the same intervals, regularly on the same weekdays and month-dates of every year of 52 weeks.

Vatican Opens Door To Minor Communists

ROME, Aug. 20—The Vatican has opened the door for Catholics who embraced Communism only in a minor capacity to re-enter the church despite Pope Pius' decree of excommunication in July.

This long-expected move took the form of a declaration by the Vatican clarifying the situation with regard to marriages between practicing Roman Catholics and persons identified as Communists.

It was divided into two categories.

The first dealt with Communists directly affected by the papal excommunication decree. Such persons are regarded simply as non-Catholics. They cannot be married inside a Catholic church in any case, and advance dispensation must be obtained on receipt of guarantees that any children of the union will be brought up in the Catholic faith.

The second applied to "rank and file" Catholic Communists—those who joined the party in ignorance and under duress.

Such Communists may marry Catholics inside the church. Both parties again must give suitable and effective assurances that their offspring will be raised as Catholics.

The Vatican thus softened the original papal decree, regarded at the time as the strongest measure of condemnation taken by the Holy See in three centuries.

The papal decree at that time made it clear that absolution for Catholic Communists was not out of the question.

On the contrary, it emphasized that the time and penance needed to obtain spiritual forgiveness depended entirely upon the extent of guilt.

The voluntary or involuntary nature of Catholic association with Communism was a vastly important factor. The question of duress was taken heavily into consideration.

More important still, the decree emphasized that those affected by the decree need not appeal direct to the Vatican, as is usual in excommunications, but that local parish priests and bishops could decide on their own authority upon the granting of absolution and restoration to the church.

It never has been possible since the decree was handed down to ascertain just how many Catholics throughout the world were affected and to what extent.

The present willingness of the church to sanction marriage between Catholics and Communists under certain well-defined conditions makes it amply clear, however, that the Holy See still differentiates strongly between acts of commission and omission.

His new action may well encourage rising Catholic resistance to Communism. It emphasizes the church's capacity for forgiveness—something entirely alien to Communist philosophy.

'Priceless' Manuscripts May Tell New Bible Story

CHICAGO, Aug. 20—A group of six international experts is engaged today in a careful painstaking study of "priceless" Biblical manuscripts found by Arabs in a crumbling cave near the Dead Sea.

One of the scholars participating in the study, which has been going on quietly for some 18 months, is Dr. John C. Trever, director of the department of the English Bible for the International Council of Religious Education, Chicago.

Dr. Trever said that the oldest of the manuscripts—scrolls on leather—is 23 feet long and contains the complete book of Isaiah.

He added that it was written in ancient Hebrew—probably around 125 B. C. Dr. Trever said:

"This pre-dates by 1,000 years the earliest previously known Isaiah manuscript in Hebrew on which the book in present versions of the Bible is based."

Four manuscripts, Dr. Trever said, are in the U. S. for study by three scholars. Whereabouts of the manuscripts have been kept secret because of their fragile condition.

According to Dr. Trever the other three manuscripts in the U. S. deal with religious history, with two being written in ancient Hebrew and the third in Aramaic. They are believed to have been written shortly before the middle of the first century.

Dr. Trever said that the document in Aramaic is so decomposed that no safe way has been found yet to unroll the leather scroll. He said scientists are still searching for a technique which will permit the manuscript to be opened and read.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Psalms 8; 19:1-6; 65:9-18; 104.

When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained: what is man that Thou art mindful of him, O Lord?

The Lord made man to have dominion over all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field; the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea.

The Lord crowns the year with His goodness . . . the pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered with corn; they also sing.

The sun ariseth, and the man goeth forth unto his work and to his labor until the evening.

PLENTY OF APPLES

THE International Apple Association, meeting in Chicago, reports that this year's apple crop is the largest since 1944. Because the Summer has been so hot, fruit in the northwest is maturing early and will go early to market. This is also true of other scattered sections.

Styles in fruit change with the years, not so fast as styles in clothing, but plainly, just the same. Baldwin used to be the favorite, 25 or 30 years ago, as an all-around apple at that time. Baldwins are now said to be declining in favor. McIntosh and Winesap are taking their place. Delicious, both golden and red, are high in popularity as the eating apple par excellence, while other varieties compete for place in the all-around class—by which is meant an apple which is good for eating raw, baking, sauce and pie.

Although the citrus fruits now constantly increase their markets, the apple remains the characteristic Winter fruit of the American people. Its keeping qualities have given it a traditional pre-eminence. An apple with a cookie is the child's great reviver of energy after school. And ask ten men what they want for dessert? Nine will reply as one: Apple pie!

NOT TO BE FORGOTTEN

A STORY is current about John J. McCloy, the new head of the military government in the American zone of Germany. A German leader had the impudence to ask him to "forget the Dachau and Belsen concentration camps and think of us Germans in terms of the new Germany." McCloy's reply was:

"While I shall do everything in my power to help you get a fresh start and win a dignified and responsible place in the family of nations, I shall not forget Dachau and Belsen."

The Germans would rise higher in the opinion of the world if they recognized that they all shared the responsibility for these hideous torture places. McCloy has just won a fight compelling the German states in the American zone to pay 850,000,000 marks indemnity to victims of the Nazis. By hitting the supporters of the Nazis in their pocketbooks, this may impress on them that the world holds them to be responsible participants in the Hitler government's guilt.

These Days

Whenever a Communist or a fellow-traveler, or just a plain liberal gets into trouble, all sorts of committees, organizations, funds are established to protect them. Thousands of dollars are collected, to which, only too often, soft-headed capitalists, Republicans and Democrats, their wives and daughters, contribute on some mistaken notion that if enough noise is made, an injustice has been done.

But when a fine American woman stands up, at great risk, to defend her country, to fight for our way of life, to denounce those who love our enemy, she is permitted to take the full brunt of the battle alone, to suffer the indignity of having her home and her savings impounded, to await the outcome of an expensive trial which may last for years. That is exactly what has happened to Mrs. Hester McCullough of Greenwich, Conn.

She had subscribed to the Greenwich Community Concert Association and, after paying her fees, discovered that Larry Adler, the harmonica player, and Paul Draper, the dancer, had been put on the program. She objected because of their affiliations with Communist-front organizations.

Mrs. McCullough wrote a letter setting forth her views. The letter was published in "The Greenwich Time." The Greenwich Community Concert Association thereupon accepted her "resignation" which had never been proffered by her. She asked for a hearing which was not granted. However, she gave the association a list of nine Communist-front organizations, cited by the attorney general of the United States, the House Committee on Un-American Activities, and the Tenney Report to the California legislature, with which Adler and Draper were associated.

Although Mrs. McCullough was not permitted to attend a meeting at which she might defend her position, Adler and Draper, accompanied by their lawyers and by Ward French and Frederick Schang of the Columbia Artists' Bureau were present. Adler and Draper admitted membership in these organizations, and others of a similar nature, but denied that they were Communists or ever had been; they insisted that they are loyal Americans.

It is impossible to use precise measurements in matters of this sort. All fellow-travelers deny that they are Communists and most of them are only sympathetic. Also all Communists, as is being made clear in Judge Medina's court daily, insist that they are patriotic Americans. Also many innocent persons are involved in accusations of Communist affiliation because they choose to hook up with Communist-front organizations. No one can know for sure if a person is a Communist unless he chooses to expose the relationship himself. Therefore, it is possible only to use certain yardsticks to make up one's mind about them. These yardsticks are:

'Round Circleville - - - Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Aroused at an early hour by the roar of a heavy truck and almost knocked out of bed a moment later by the thunder of a second. Up smiling, however, for the rolling law breakers have made contact with local law enforcement officers and the real battle should be joined next week. The sheriff has made two arrests this week and the police continue issuing their warnings that after next Thursday all trucks with inadequate motors will be halted and their drivers arrested.

Police have been issuing the warnings since last week, and their activity, coupled with the sheriff's pair of arrests, mean some lessening of the continuous thunder. The big majority of truck owners, however, ignores the warnings of police and possible arrest by the sheriff. Next week we will see some real action. And these prints will give you the daily score.

And did you note that Washington C. H. has joined in on the fight against illegal truck operation? Now, if Chillicothe and Lancaster will take a hand the situation in this part of the state should be ironed out in short order. Anyway, local public sentiment now is assurance that the fight will be carried on here regardless of the action or lack of action in other communities.

And did you note a few days ago the statement by one member of the board of county commissioners that the trucks are neither louder nor dirtier than the railroads. He overlooked a few pertinent facts. When the rails were laid (at the cost of the railroads, not taxpayers) they went in at the far edge of the village. Since then the city has expanded and many folk have erected homes in close proximity to the railroads. They knew what they were getting into. But the folk on our main streets had no idea what was coming when they erected their homes. They had no idea that the streets in front of their homes soon were to become traffic lanes for heavy commercial hauling and on the present scale. And they did not know that these vehicles were for the most part to become daily breakers of the law. Let's admit, for the sake of argument, that the trucks are neither louder nor dirtier than the railroads and then consider the intervals between the passing of trains and the passing of trucks. Trucks pass every few minutes, and we mean few, very few. It is possible to catch a few winks of sleep between trains. The trucks just moved in on us, Mr. Commissioner. What would be your attitude if the railroads sought to relay their lines on Court and Main streets?

Truck drivers warned of the August 25th deadline have said that it is impossible to muffle the exhausts of diesel motors. Maybe they should be escorted to the south end to see the diesel switch engine operated by the Pennsylvania railroad. They will hear little exhaust racket from it. But they should not be permitted to hear that whistle or air horn or whatever it is. There's a real disturber of the night-time peace. That thing could be toned down a lot and still be effective. No need of warning persons a mile away from the crossings.

Anyway, the real drive is about to start. Starting the movement and being filled with determination that it will continue in behalf of reasonable peace and quiet for the general public has been, and will continue to be a real pleasure.

Let's sit back for a few days and see what really does happen.

Ectopic Pregnancy Demands Prompt Medical Attention

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

EVERY woman should have some knowledge of the condition known as ectopic pregnancy. I say this because during recent months, I have been struck by the number of needless deaths from this cause; deaths which might have been easily prevented had the women themselves known enough about their symptoms to have sought proper medical aid in time.

An ectopic pregnancy is one which occurs outside the womb. It may take place in the ovary itself; or even in the abdominal cavity, but the most usual location is within the fallopian tube which leads from the ovary to the womb. In these situations, there is grave danger of rupture and fatal hemorrhage if treatment is too long delayed.

Fortunately, however, there are signs that such a pregnancy exists before this stage is reached. About three-fourths of the women with this condition have irregular bleeding. Over one-third have pain in the upper arms and chest. Also, there may be symptoms of irritation of the bladder, such as pain on emptying the bladder, and frequent emptying. There may be painful bowel movements, pain in the lower part of the spine, or diarrhea.

Pain in Abdomen

It would appear that pain in the abdomen, often with vomiting and faintness, is the most constant symptom of a ruptured ectopic pregnancy. In addition, there is pallor or paleness of the skin and the patient may become very sick. The temperature varies from 99 F. to 100 F. while the pulse rate is increased to over 100 per minute. The abdomen may be swollen, but there is no stiffness or rigidity of the abdominal muscles. This type of pregnancy is likely to occur in women who find it difficult to become pregnant. A number of them have had one or two previous pregnancies, ending by early or premature delivery of the baby. Enlargement of the ovaries is another factor which may contribute to this condition, as is chronic appendicitis.

Immediately upon the diagnosis of ectopic pregnancy, an operation should be performed. In this operation the affected tube is completely removed, with or without removal of the ovary, depending on its condition. If the patient shows symptoms of shock or collapse, injections into a vein of blood or plasma, which is the liquid part of the blood, should be started at once.

Any woman who believes that she is pregnant should consult her doctor at once and remain under his care throughout the period of pregnancy. When making regular visits to his office, she should describe to him any symptoms which might possibly indicate ectopic pregnancy so that he can make sure whether or not such a condition exists. However, if symptoms of a ruptured ectopic pregnancy come on, there should be no waiting until the time for a regular visit. An emergency call to the doctor should be made at once.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

W. V.: What is the cause of aplastic anemia and what is the treatment for this condition?

Answer: The cause of aplastic anemia cannot be determined, in most instances. It is possible that it may be due to poisoning which damages the blood-forming organs. There is no treatment which would produce a cure, insofar as is known at the present time. Repeated blood transfusions act as a palliative measure. When it is caused by such drugs as arsenic or the sulfonamide drugs, then the withdrawal of these drugs leads to complete recovery.

ABILITIES BALANCED

SOME players are able bidders but rather inept players of the cards. Others can play them beautifully, but are deficient in sound bidding. You can almost put it down as a general rule, however, that the better bidders are also the better players and the worse bidders are the worse players. In other words, abilities usually are balanced and the unbalanced people are the exceptions.

South kicked away hundreds of points by bidding that 1-No Trump when he should have doubled.

North would have passed. The defenders might have limited East to one trump trick and two aces to set him 1100 points.

But that was nothing compared to the fact that South butchered his own contract, which was easy to make. When West led the club 4, East smartly played the Q. South, fearful that West had the A-J, was afraid to chance a club lead through his K. So he took the trick with that card. When he later had to lose a diamond to East, the latter scored the club A and led the 7 to produce the tricks that set South.

Brief thought should have told South that East had to have the club A for his opening bid. He therefore should have held up his K. East would have used the A for the next lead and the K would have taken the third trick. When East later won with the diamond A, he could not have returned a club, so South would have raked in a total of ten tricks.

SYNOPSIS
Finding herself suddenly broke, young beautiful, socially prominent Terry Austin flies from Guatemala to New York bent on making a brilliant marriage. No one knows that Terry's vast family fortune had been swept away in a Central American political fiasco, no one except her old school girl friend, Helen Lannis, now happily married and living in New York. Helen stands by secretly, staunchly. Things begin to happen for Terry when she and Helen visit the Johnsons in Connecticut. Here they meet handsome Chris Russell of the wealthy Russell Hawaiian sugar family. Terry sets her cap for him. Confident that she has made a conquest, Terry is delighted when later on back in New York Chris phones her for a date. A whirlwind courtship ensues. Chris proposes suddenly and Terry decides to marry him at once in a quiet wedding ceremony.

CHAPTER TWELVE

TERRY was married in a white gabardine suit, and a white batiste blouse exquisite with embroidery. She did not possess a hat, so Helen marched her out and bought her one, also white, with the faintest pink blossoms and a swirl of veiling. Her flowers were gardenias.

The Johnsons came, Gwen and Paul, Dick and his parents, and the ceremony was performed by the Lannis' clergyman. Afterward Margaret, supplemented by an extra maid, served the simple breakfast and Frank opened the wine. The wedding was his gift, that and some silver which had belonged to his mother. "From Helen and me," he told Terry, "and to blazes with Chris for not letting me give him a bachelor dinner, small but select, and complete with hangover."

From Helen, the blue garters, the beautiful handkerchief, the bottle of perfume and a check. She gave the check to Terry, privately. She said, "It isn't much, darling, just—mad money. And it will keep you in stockings for a while."

"I won't need stockings," said Terry, bemused. "I'll live on a beach and eat fish and whatever the other things Chris talks about. Poi." She began to cry at that juncture. "I'm so happy and so grateful," she explained.

They had not known where to go on their wedding journey. Hawaii eventually, but before that, Where? they asked each other. Chris suggested a number of places. Sea Island? He had been there, she would like it. Pinehurst? Dick's parents urged Asheville, or Virginia, at this time of the year. And the other Johnsons offered their house "until you make up your mind," they said. "Not that our Susan is much of a cook, but what do you care?"

Paul was going on a business trip to the West Coast and Gwen with him. The boys would not be home until the middle of June. Sam was staying in school to take some examinations and Paul Jr. going to visit a friend before returning. So the house was theirs. And it was where they had met, so entirely fitting for a honeymoon.

You couldn't buy a car for love or under-the-counter money on such short notice. But Chris was able to rent one for the short time they were to be in Connecticut through a friend of Frank's. After that they would stay in town for a while and then decide. Chris had managed to wrangle reservation in and faced each other in tions. There was rice in the rented car and in Terry's hair when, driving out of town, she took off the absurd pretty hat and shook her head vigorously. "But," she said, "thank heaven for civilized friends. No signs on the car itself!"

"I'm sure enough. Fatuous," said Chris, "positively smug. Don't let me drive too fast. I won't want to spend a day in the pokey. Not this day."

"Pokey?"

"I forgot that you still have things to learn about our language," he told her. "Jail, darling."

The Parkway was beautiful, the trees in new leaf, the orchards along the road wild with white and rosy bloom. It was a flawless day, warm and wonderful.

She said suddenly, "We don't know very much about each other, Chris, which seems strange, because we've talked and talked." "But we do know," he assured her, "the essential things. You know all about you. You are afraid of snakes and not of mice, you like hot weather and hate the cold, you like green and white and gray and wood violet, you like gardenias, yellow roses and most tropical flowers. You are a Bing Crosby addict and a Disney fan. I know most of your dislikes, including your curious distaste for ballet. I know your taste in music and in books—fairly tales, happy endings, poetry, French for choice. You don't like mysteries, on the screen or in books. I'll have to re-educate you there."

She said, "Is it enough to know each other's likes and dislikes?" "Is it enough," he said quietly, "to know each other's love?"

And so they came, by the Parkway and back roads, to the house in the valley where Susan, greatly excited, was waiting for them. There were flowers from the spring garden downstairs and in the big guest room and new candles on the dining-room table waiting to be lighted.

Chris went off to take, he said, a look around and Terry changed into the frock she loved best, and which Chris had never seen. She thought, I wish I had trunks and trunks of new clothes I'd never worn. But her trunks, full of clothes she had worn, were still at Helen's until their course was decided, and her furs were in storage.

The dress was long, the violet color she loved, and very plain, a beautiful dress. It had been made for her shortly before her father's death. It would always be in fashion. She put pearls about her neck, the gleaming, double rope, and went downstairs to find Chris. The light was long and golden on the trees and hills.

Chris made cocktails in the pantry with Susan's fluttering help and brought them to the terrace. He went upstairs and fetched Terry a white coat, against the possible chill of sunset, and they sat there for a long time, had their drinks, and watched the rosy light deepen to dusky blue. And then it was dinner time and they had managed to wrangle reservation in and faced each other in the flickering candlelight and did not know what they ate or drank—which was perhaps fortunate, because Susan, although carefully instructed by her employer, had been liberal with the salt and generous with the flame: the meat was slightly scorched, the vegetables like brine. Who knew or cared? Not even Susan.

Gwen had left them some wine. She said, "We hate the stuff, we're strictly beer. Drink it up, it came from one of Paul's clients. And you won't get the bill," she had added, laughing, as she and Terry had discussed the provisioning of the house.

Burgundy therefore with the steak, a good vintage, and Medoc. Chris lifted his glass. "To us," he said, "and to the happily ever after."

After a week they returned to New York, and took up their reservations at the hotel, in a suite overlooking the Park and with a magnificent living room. "We can give a dance," said Chris, surveying it after the bellboys had gone. "May I have the pleasure, Mrs. Russell?" He held out his arms, she went into them, and they danced gravely around the room laughing immoderately. There was considerable mail on one of the tables: a note from Helen, sent by hand—when would Terry and Chris dine? she inquired; mail from the Cotters and others who had read the inconspicuous item that announced the marriage; mail for Chris and cables. He showed a sheaf of them to his wife. "All of the clan," he said, "very congratulatory and when are we coming out?"

It was wonderful, the suite was full of management flowers, the weather not yet too warm, although neither of them would mind that, and Chris said, "Let's celebrate."

"Again?"

"Always." He telephoned downstairs for theatre tickets, and coaxed the agency into producing them; he telephoned, later, for dinner, which came up on a table, with rosebuds in a silver vase, the entrée in a portable oven, wine in an ice bucket. And Terry put on a long frock and they went to the theatre, and afterward to a dance.

During the following week, they dined with Helen and Frank, with the Southards, Jim Southard drawing Chris aside to say, "You simply must persuade your wife to sit for me. I thought her strikingly attractive before but now she is beautiful..." and with all the Johnsons, at the home of young Dick's parents. Dick was all right, he was going to take his examinations, he would get into college this time, for sure, he promised.

Friends and parties and window shopping, lazy mornings and late nights, and then Terry sitting up in bed and yawning, at the end of the week. "I must pull myself together and buy some clothes. Oh, not many—just town things for summer if we're staying any length of time..."

The real rumpus ensued, however, when a visitor indicated a photograph of the deceased in the lady's parlor, and asked, "Who is that distinguished-looking gentleman?" The lady's reply was what sent her neighbors into a tallsip. "That's my poor brother-in-law," she sighed. "He passed away recently."

Marjorie Kielmeier Wed To Circleville Man In Columbus Rites Saturday

Wm. Thornton Is Bridegroom

Before an altar decorated with white gladioli and asters, Miss Marjorie Carolyn Kielmeier of Reynoldsburg and William Allen Thornton of Circleville exchanged wedding vows in Christ the King Church in Columbus at 9:30 Saturday morning.

Miss Kielmeier is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Kielmeier of Graham Road, Reynoldsburg. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen E. Thornton of 335 East Main street, Circleville.

The Rev. Father Leo Brehm officiated at the ceremony, in which the bride was given in marriage by her father.

She wore a white satin gown, fashioned along princess lines with cap sleeves and with a Peter Pan collar trimmed in tiny seed pearls. She wore long gauntlets, which came to points over her hands. The full skirt fell into a graceful cathedral train. Her finger tip veil of imported illusion was fastened to a tiara of seed pearls.

The bridal bouquet was of white pom poms, stephanotis and the traditional white orchid, with satin streamers in cascade effect.

Miss Regina Thornton, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. Her gown was of yellow frosted organza, made in princess lines with a full hoop skirt, high ruffled neck line and cap sleeves. She wore long gauntlets. Her matching picture hat of horse hair braid had a large satin bow and streamers. She carried a bouquet of white gladioli surrounded by blue pom poms.

Robert Gullick of Hebron served the bridegroom as best man. Seating the guests were James Kielmeier of Reynoldsburg, brother of the bride; Neil Leist and Clark Hunsicker Jr., both of Circleville, and Ted Corcoran of Williamsport.

Immediately following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast for the family and bridal party was held in Hoffman's Garden.

Two hundred guests were invited to the reception in the home of the bride's parents on Graham road. In front of the fireplace was an arrangement of white gladioli while vases of pom poms decorated the other rooms of the house.

To receive the guests, the bride's mother wore a navy blue shadow lace dress with white accessories and a corsage of white gladioli, while the bridegroom's mother was gowned in an American beauty rose crepe dress. Her accessories were of black, her corsage of white gladioli.

For her wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Canada, the bride changed to an aqua dressmaker's suit with white accessories. She wore the orchid from her bridal bouquet.

The former Miss Keilmeyer was graduated by Reynoldsburg high school and attended Ohio State university.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Circleville high school, attended Greenbrier Military Academy. He is a veteran of World War II. At present he is engaged in farming.

Judges Find Competition Close In Girls' 4-H Club Style Revue Here

5 State Fair Entries Named

Pickaway County common pleas courtroom was the scene of some very stern judgments handed down by the three presiding judges at the style revue of the 4-H clubs held Friday afternoon.

The judges, Miss Eva Kinsey, assistant State 4-H Club director, Mrs. Beryl Stevenson and Mrs. Edwin Buck were obliged to make some hair splitting decisions on the work the 4-H clubbers displayed in the revue.

Only projects which received an "A" grade were eligible for competition. And Miss Genevieve Alley, County home demonstration agent, who is a close grader herself, knew that the judges would be up against some close competition.

Miss Alley expressed her pride in the work done by all the 4-H County clubs. The judges were enthusiastic about the revue and thought the show an outstanding affair.

They admitted that when the four girls who modeled the "complete costume" the difference in all four was only one and one half points.

The ten winners in each class will be presented in a 4-H fashion revue the last night of the Pickaway County Fair.

As a result of the style revue Friday, the two costumes for exhibit at the Ohio State Fair will be:

"Complete Costume"—Florence Lutz, Salt Creek Victory Stitches.

"Sports Costume"—Margie Dearth, Salt Creek Victory Stitches.

The three girls to model their costumes at the state fair will be:

"Complete Costume"—Patty Hamman, Atlanta Silver Thimbles.

"Tailored Clothes"—Nita Jean Michel, Darby Flying Needles.

"Dressup Dress"—Jean Dearth, Salt Creek Victory Stitches.

Browns, 49ers Battle To 21-21 Grid Deadlock

CLEVELAND, Aug. 20 — The Cleveland Browns' three-year reign as kings of the All-America Football Conference may come to an abrupt end this season—and then, again, it may not.

That was the divided sentiment of Coach Lawrence "Buck" Shaw of the San Francisco 49ers and Cleveland Mentor Paul Brown after they watched their two clubs battle to a 21-21 tie last night in Cleveland Stadium.

Coach Shaw was more confident than ever that his boys are capable of dumping the Browns, who have been victorious in five of seven games with the West Coast griders. The Browns only defeat came in the first meeting of the two teams.

Shaw, smiling broadly after the contest, repeated his new slogan:

"It's the '49ers in '49."

AS FAR AS the lean, hungry-looking "brain" of the defending champs is concerned, the Browns lost the game, but he added that "it won't happen again."

"I always consider a tie game a loss," Brown said in the dressing room after the contest, "especially when our opponent is San Francisco."

"We don't look good yet and we have to get better—or else. I wasn't at all satisfied with several performances, especially yours," Brown added as he addressed one of his ace performers.

"They have the same tough club," the former Ohio State mentor continued. "Our teams are so evenly matched that a break here or there will mean the game. That was a peculiar one in the first period."

He was referring to the '49ers first touchdown, which came when End Gail Bruce fell on a free ball in the Browns' end zone. Big Lou Rymkus had pulled out to lead interference for the Browns and his elbow struck an attempted lateral by Quarterback Otto Graham and deflected it toward the end zone.

That was the '49ers first score, but it wasn't long until End Alvin Beals snagged a 39-yard pass from Quarterback Frankie Albert, to make the score 13-0 in the second canto. Joe Vetrano made good on the extra points.

A FEW MINUTES later, however, the Browns travelled 66 yards for their first tally with Dub Jones taking a pass from Graham and covering 46 yards for a touchdown on the final play. Lou Groza's first attempted conversion was good, as were his next two.

A 24-yard aerial from Graham, who completed eight of 14 passes, to Dante Lavelli in a corner of the end zone knotted the count at 14-all early in the third quarter.

Halfback Ara Parseghian turned in the next six points for the Browns as he broke loose and scampered 35 yards off tackle in the same period.

Just when the game apparently was in the well-known bag, Halfback John Strykowski snared another Albert pass and dashed 11 yards into the end zone with only 55 seconds remaining in the game.

In the statistics department, however, the Browns were the victors. They piled up a total offense of 393 yards, as compared with the '49ers' 288.

Irwin Crew Tops Oilers To Lead Ashville Loop

Irwin's Insurance moved into first place Thursday in the Ashville football league by defeating Pure Oil, 13 to 3.

Shaw was the winning pitcher, E. Wilson catching. For Pure Oil, Barr and Glick pitched with Dennis and R. Wilson catching. Losing pitcher was Barr.

Irwin's scored six runs in the first inning and led all the way. Brinker of Irwin's homered with two on for the longest hit of the game.

Zwayer's and B and C. Oil are now tied for second place.

Demon Hanover Takes Lush Trot

WESTBURY, N. Y., Aug. 20—Demon Hanover repeated his triumph of last week when the 1948 Hambletonian champion took his second straight victory of the season in the Montour Trot in 2:08 2-5 last night.

The Roosevelt Raceway event was worth $5000 to the winner. After trailing in fifth position behind some of the country's top free-for-all trotters Demon Hanover came down the stretch to pass Vita Lee and Chris Spencer in the stretch as both these pace-setters made breaks.

Pitcher-Preacher Hurls Despite Lack of Players

Preachers always quote that "where two or three are gathered together..." the work will carry on.

The Rev. C. A. Holmquist of Ashville practices that on the softball diamond as well as in the pulpit.

Friday, his Ashville-Lockbourne Lutheran softball team traveled to Columbus to play Coumbus St. Paul.

Although Rev. Mr. Holmquist's team lacked two players—the second baseman and the rightfielder—failed to show up—the cleric mounted the pitcher's hill and hurled anyway.

The Ashville team lost 8 to 5, but it was evident that Rev. Mr. Holmquist would have carried on even if he were the only player on his squad to show up for the contest.

Next week, however, the Ashvillers hope to make a better showing. St. Paul furnishes the opposition that time in the season finale.

Ex-Localite Says He Will Quit OSU Pressbox

Christopher (Chris) Waidelich has decided not to return to the Ohio State university press box to his telegraph key this football season.

The veteran Western Union telegrapher, who first learned his job by "hanging around the railroad station" in Circleville and memorizing the Morse characters at the age of ten, is retiring.

Since his first appearance at the old Ohio field in 1916 and virtually "growing up" with the OSU football program, "Chris" has sent millions of words over the telegraph circuits.

He began as a messenger boy in Circleville and went to Columbus two years later. He worked in Pittsburgh and returned to Lancaster in 1909. He has lived in Columbus since his transfer there in 1916.

Bears, Steelers Await Battle

CINCINNATI, Aug. 20 — The Chicago Bears make their 1949 professional football debut here tonight in an exhibition game against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Coach George Halas of the Bears said he hoped to use 47 of the 48 men he had in uniform. Veteran Quarterback Sid Luckman will not play because of an operation which he underwent in early Summer.

Pittsburgh Coach John P. Michelosen said that his squad is beset by holdouts and many of the key men from last year's squad are missing. He added that the Steelers would be doing well to hold the score down.

Jap Swimmers Far Outclass Yankee Tankers

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 20—Japan's swimming team dunked America's water ace last night and hopelessly outclassed them during the National AAU meet which ended in a blaze of glory for Hironoshin Furuhashi and his fellow members of the Tokyo Swim Club.

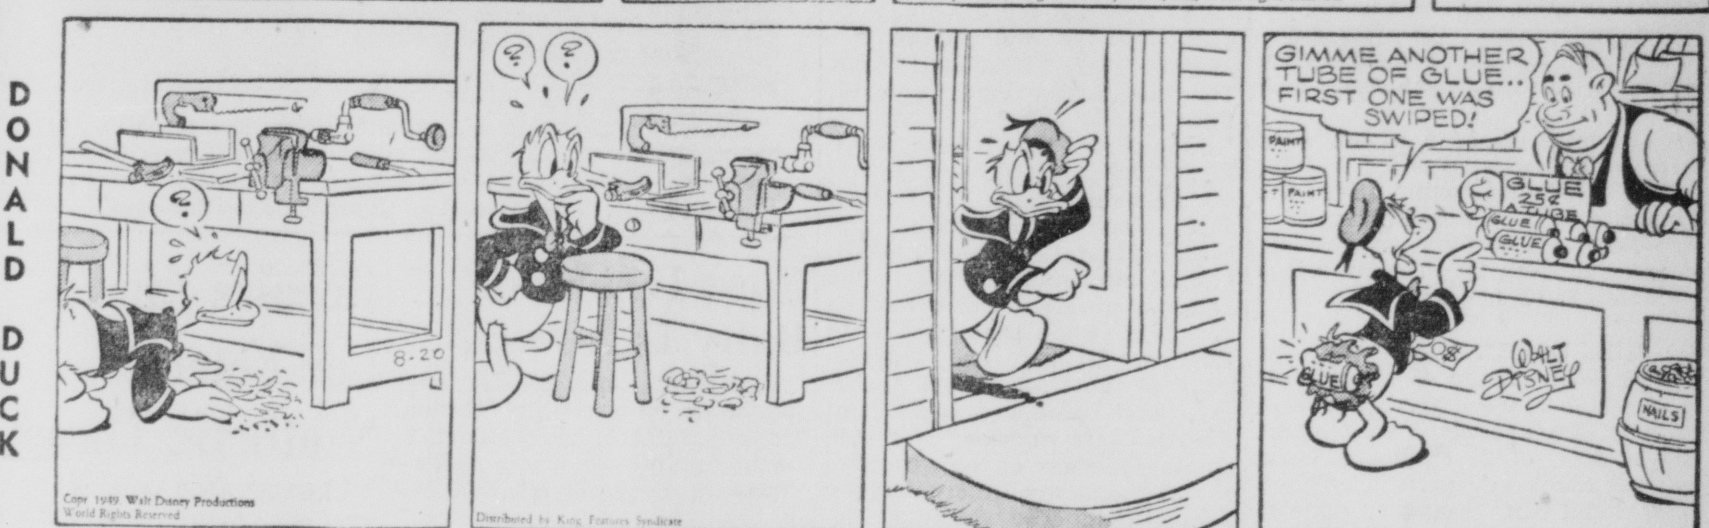

For the third night running the "Flying Fish of Fujiyama," who revolutionized free-style swimming with a new technique, set a new world record.

He raced through the 800 meters before 7,000 fans in Los Angeles Municipal Swimming Stadium in 9:35.5 to erase Bill Smith's 1941 mark of 9:51.7.

During the two previous nights, Furuhashi set new world records in the 1500 meters and the 400 meters. He also sparked his team to a new world standard in the 800-meter relay.

Shiro Hashizume and Yoshio Tanaka finished second and third behind the "Flying Fish" in the 800 meters.

The Japanese won every free-style event except one for a lopsided team score of 63 points to 34 for their nearest competitor, the Brighton Swim Club of Atlantic City, N. J.

Egyptian Ready To Challenge English Channel

FOLKESTONE, Aug. 20 — Fahmy Attalla, 40-year-old Egyptian, left Folkestone for France today where he will start a cross-channel swimming attempt from Cap Gris-Nez this afternoon.

The weather was favorable with a light breeze and quiet waters.

Cuban Jose Cortinas made the attempt Thursday but had to give up half-way across the 21-mile channel after six hours.

Meanwhile in Dover, aspiring channel-swimmer Shirley May France plans to leave tomorrow for a few days rest at the English seaside resort of Torquay before resuming her strenuous training routine.

The 17-year-old Somerset, Mass., swimmer, whose planned cross-channel effort earlier in the week was called off because of unfavorable weather, was accompanied by her father.

Boyers Swamp Williamsport

In a makeup game of Circleville Softball League Friday night, Boyers swamped Williamsport 13-2.

Chalking up five runs in the first inning, the winners were never threatened although they dribbled in eight more tallies before the final putout.

Christopher (Chris) Waidelich has decided not to return to the Ohio State university press box to his telegraph key this football season.

The veteran Western Union telegrapher, who first learned his job by "hanging around the railroad station" in Circleville and memorizing the Morse characters at the age of ten, is retiring.

Since his first appearance at the old Ohio field in 1916 and virtually "growing up" with the OSU football program, "Chris" has sent millions of words over the telegraph circuits.

He began as a messenger boy in Circleville and went to Columbus two years later. He worked in Pittsburgh and returned to Lancaster in 1909. He has lived in Columbus since his transfer there in 1916.

While the mayor's probe of alleged cases of brutality in the Columbus police department is recessed until Monday, officers were ordered to protect their rights as citizens.
